Does class size affect learning outcomes?

Learning is a crucial process for students as it acts as a changing factor in their lives. The process, therefore, requires ample time and proper concentration for the successful occurrence. Class size is a factor to be considered when effective learning is desired. It can, therefore, affect learning outcomes either positively or negatively given that other factors are constant. This paper looks at how the size of a class can influence the learning outcomes if not regulated to the standard size recommended. It can, therefore, be said that class size affects the outcomes of learning because it influences the concentration of the students, determines attention given by the teacher to students, and influences healthy learning.

How class size affects the concentration of students

The essence of classrooms is to provide the right environment for the students to get learning content. Additionally, the size of the class and the student load (total number of students taught in a class at any given time) contribute to the understanding of the learning content (Monks, Schmidt, 15). The ideal classroom size requires that all the students are able to effectively interact with their teacher at any time. If the class is too big than the ideal size, the level of concentration of the students especially those who are at the back is reduced. The reason for this is that the voice projection of the teacher might be inaudible and unclear. Secondly, there is a risk of interference and destruction from the learning, and

Chapter 1 Critical Thinking/Essay Questions

1. Dr. Soso completes a research project and determines that children who watch less television earn higher grades in math. Dr. Soso's study is published in major newspapers across the country and excited parents turn off their televisions in anticipation of their children's grades rising. However, after ten weeks with no television, their children's math grades fail to improve. The parents are outraged. "How could this be?" they ask, "Did we really give up 10 weeks of cartoons for no reason?"

As Dr. Soso's assistant, you are asked to compose a letter to these parents explaining to them why their children's math grades failed to rise. Please include in your explanation the differences between the experimental and correlational method. Also, what responsibility might the parents have in this situation for their children's math grades?

2. As a newly minted chapter one reader, you are asked to design an experiment to determine the impact of caffeine upon performance in introductory psychology courses. Utilizing the scientific method, please describe how you would go about determining the impact of caffeine. What are the factors that you must consider? Please include a discussion of independent and dependent variables, control, sampling and

3. Every year, a large amount of money is spent on products derived via pseudoscience. Your task for this question is to find an example of a book or a product that could be described as pseudoscience (you may even find an example on those late night infomercials). After you find your example, discuss how people might be able to avoid being taken advantage of by utilizing the features of critical thinking that are listed in your text. Please demonstrate how at least 4 out of the 8 features of critical thinking could cast doubt upon the item you chose to analyze.

4. Historically, higher education has not been very inviting for women. What might have been the cause of this change? And why are we now seeing the numbers of women begin to exceed that of men in colleges across America?

Writing a Critical Analysis

1. Is the argument valid (internally consistent, logical)? Do conclusions follow from the 2. Is the argument supported by evidence?

Develop your own thesis.

Although you must identify the author's thesis, you must also develop and support your own thesis about the author's work. In your thesis, identify the author's main argument, and state whether or not you think the author achieves this purpose. Here is an example: In What Jane Austen Ate and Charles Dickens Knew, Duniel Pool constructs a useful social history of eighteenth and intertenth century England, by providing a brief overview of various facets of daily life.

4. Does the author leave out important information?

Organize your analysis. background information, such as the period in which the book was written, or why the topic of the book is of interest to your audience as well as you. For example, "Pool's social history is

HOW TO WRITE A LITERARY ANALYSIS ESSAY

The purpose of a literary analysis essay is to carefully examine and sometimes evaluate a work of literature or an aspect of a work of literature. As with any analysis, this requires you to break the subject down into its component parts. Examining the different elements of a piece of literature is not an end in itself but rather a process to help you better appreciate and understand the work of literature as a whole. For instance, an analysis of a poem might deal with the different types of images in a poem or with the relationship between the form and content of the work. If you were to analyze (discuss and explain) a play, you might analyze the relationship between a subplot and the main plot, or you might analyze the character flaw of the tragic hero by tracing how it is revealed through the acts of the play. Analyzing a short story might include identifying a particular theme (like the difficulty of making the transition from adolescence to adulthood) and showing how the writer suggests that theme through the point of view from which the story is told; or you might also explain how the main character's attitude toward women is revealed through his dialogue and/or actions.

REMEMBER: Writing is the sharpened, focused expression of thought and study. As you develop your writing skills, you will also improve your perceptions and increase your critical abilities. Writing ultimately boils down to the development of an idea. Your objective in writing a literary analysis essay is to convince the person reading your essay that you have supported the idea you are developing. Unlike ordinary conversation and classroom discussion, writing must stick with great determination to the specific point of development. This kind of writing demands tight organization and control. Therefore, your essay must have a central idea (thesis), it must have several paragraphs that grow systematically out of the central idea, and everything in it must be directly related to the central idea and must contribute to the reader's understanding of that central idea. These three principles are listed again below:

- Your essay must cover the topic you are writing about.
- Your essay must have a central idea (stated in your thesis) that governs its development.
- Your essay must be organized so that every part contributes something to the reader's understanding of the central idea.

THE ELEMENTS OF A SOLID ESSAY

The Thesis Statement

The thesis statement tells your reader what to expect: it is a restricted, precisely worded declarative sentence that states the purpose of your essay — the point you are trying to make. Without a carefully conceived thesis, an essay has no chance of success. The following are thesis statements which would work for a 500-750 word literary analysis essay:

Gwendolyn Brooks's 1960 poem "The Ballad of Rudolph Reed" demonstrates how the poet uses the conventional poetic form of the ballad to treat the unconventional poetic subject of racial intolerance.

The fate of the main characters in Antigone illustrates the danger of excessive pride.

The imagery in Dylan Thomas's poem "Fern Hill" reveals the ambiguity of humans' relationship with nature.

Typically, the thesis statement falls at the end of your introductory paragraph.

To do that, you break them and study them in detail. Students often confuse analysis with summary and get a lower degree as a result. Do you want to know how to write critically?
